DEVON-X created at Sci-tech

By Jon

Campers in the robotics workshop have announced they have completed turning Devin Barker into a cyborg. After days of hard work, the Cyber-being, formerly known as Devon Barker, the young roboticists have unveiled him to the world. Now calling itself DEVON-X the mix of human and machine boasts significant upgrades, a supercomputer brain, rocket boots and an extensive fire suppression system for Byfield's protection. DEVON-X intends to use its personal AM/FM radio functionality to ease communication amongst the leadership team. DEVON-X will be taking his inaugural flight into space to test out the high-quality movement algorithms painstakingly programmed by Joe Zaffuto from the animation workshop. Joe states his optimism at the ability of DEVON-X to change the world "Soon everyone will know the name of Joe Zaffuto, and DEVON-X" Joe then broke into maniacal laughter. DEVON-X's booming Synthesized voice announced today that it plans to help the world by attempting to connect all mobile communications through himself calling it the "DEVON-NET". DEVON-X stated "All will become one with the DEVON-NET...soon" We here Sci-tech time appreciate DEVON-X's and Joe's humanitarian efforts.
