Today's Story

Are You Infected?

A Satire News Story By Rebecca

Campers and counselors alike have been flooding the Mir-pah-ah with the following symptoms: nausea, confusion, hallucinations, and sudden fainting spells. Upon further questioning, it was discovered that, in each case, the symptoms become apparent during or after various meals. For example, camper Jimmy Smith (who was seen walking up the down line to get a second dessert and then in the outdoor for the dish conveyor) passed out moments after emerging from the dish line. Campers from the dorms of those affected were brought in for questioning. All witnesses have confirmed the theory put forward by the nurses: the virus is caused by the confusion of walking against the traffic in the Chadar Ochel. To test their hypothesis, the nurses recruited a group of counselors to walk down the up line in the Chadar Ochel. The group developed symptoms of the virus within minutes. No cure has yet been found, but it can be prevented. Every counselor is now equipped with the skills to explain the proper way to walk in the Chadar Ochel. If you are unsure of which way to walk in the Chadar Ochel, we here at the Sci-Tech Times urge you not to risk it, just ask.

Bonus Satire Story By Jon

In inspiring News Danny Fain, Video Game instructor, has regained the use of his hands after a chug input party accident. He spent 3 years training in an in a monastery in Tibet. It has been reported that portals of sparks have been appearing in his vicinity. He has also been able to control the time in his workshop down to the second. We here love this new sorcerer supreme.
