The Final Update on the Chris Lamothe Campaign

A Satire News Story By Lyssa

After a long and grueling campaign, with many ups and downs, we here at the Sci-Tech Times are happy to report that THE Christopher Lamothe has won the race for the Presidency of the United States of America. It was a long and hard race for the Lamothe campaign with many hurdles. Back in the early months of the campaign trail, the Lamothe campaign was plagued with the backlash from what is referred to as “Lobstergate” where Lamothe was accused of using campaign funds to buy the world’s biggest lobster roll (weighing in at 600 pounds). Quickly after Lobstergate, the Lamothe campaign faced another hurdle when opponent Cindy Peptrack entered the race with a solid campaign centered around health care, a subject that was never a vital issue for the Lamothe campaign. After several close debates and a few ill-targeted ads, Lamothe has done the impossible and won the election. Though his victory was short-lived. Shortly being declared the winner of the presidential election, Lamothe took to the stage and addressed the entire nation. In his speech, he made the executive order that there was going to be a new defense force for the United States, but it will focus specifically on a small section of Massachusetts known as Byfield. This new defense force will be known as SHMIRA, and he (Chris Lamothe) will be the main guy in charge, but since this new position as the head of SHMIRA will take up most of his time, he will have to step down as President of The United States.
