Sci-Tech Times Is Shutting Down

A Satire News Story By Lyssa

As of today, the Sci-Tech Times will be shutting down for the foreseeable future. After receiving several accusations about spreading “fake news,” stockholders have begun to pull out, leaving this publication underfunded. CEO of the Sci-Tech Times, Lyssa, and Headwriter, Jon, are standing by their work. “These are nothing but accusations!” Jon announced to the world, “Of course Chris Lamothe spent his campaign money on a 600-pound lobster roll! If he didn’t, then why was he covered in Lemon juice and butter at the press briefing?” “Do you guys mean to tell us that Jayme isn’t a barbarian?” adds Lyssa, “How else could you explain the sudden disappearance of every single air conditioner from Sci-Tech West?” “And the Incinnamaster is real.” Jon added, “It is Aaron Gurvis. I have seen the proof with my own two eyes. He is really really really bad at hiding his secret identity.” Jon and Lyssa’s attempts to defend the name of this newspaper up to this point have been ineffective. Though the Sci-Tech Times will have to disappear, for the time being, Lyssa and Jon will do everything in their power to bring it back bigger and better than ever. Until next time Sci-Tech.
