Sci-Tech East Announces Barbarian Initiative

By Jon

Today director Jayme Dale Mallindine has announced she will be leading the new barbarian workshop at Sci-Tech East. She has decided to shed her former identity as a camp director and take the name Jay-Nor the Conqueror, she has announced plans to raid the campus of Sci-Tech West to steal their air conditioning units. At a press conference Jay-Nor, brandishing a large double edged axe, stated “we will sail in longboats to Sci-Tech West and have our fill of food and battle and return with the delights of conquest”. The Sci-Tech Times would like to point out that Sci-Tech West is located outside of Los Angeles and is not reachable by water within a reasonable time frame. When pressed for comment Jay-Nor flew into a rage; smashing several chairs, tables and one reporter in the process. Luckily the Sci-Tech Times has decent health insurance. While Jay-Nor has been very public about her plans for a raid, it is still unknown if any other people will be joining the planned barbarian horde but loud chanting and battle singing has been heard from the Technion at night and listeners hear the voice of Will Mason performing pre-battle music, but it is unknown if he is taking up the role of barbarian or has decided to become a bard to support raid with inspirational tunes. Little else is known of Jay-Nor’s intentions towards other URJ camps, but witnesses have seen maps leading to Eisner and Crane Lake in her office. Here at the Sci-Tech Times, we wish Jay-Nor a battle that proves her might to the world!
