Riddle Of The Day

Take off my skin - I won't cry, but you will! What am I?

Yesterday's Answer: Two, the inside and the outside

E.T by Sasha Kogan

I look up at the sky.

Some see the glistening, white Dots called stars.

"What else is there?" they ask No-one thinks else more, but what if.

The stars are ExtraTerrestrials

Today's Story

An Avenger Of Our Own A Satire News Story By Jon

Over the last few days we have had reports of a red spandex wearing vigilante defending the vicinity of camp. Many have speculated that Aaron Gurvis is the costumed superhero known as the Incinmaster, commonly found stopping campers from using the dish rooms incorrectly and summoning pillars of fire in his spare time. Aaron has had a set of distinct similarities with the Sci-Tech savior, but the most telling is when a camper Jimmy Smith, age 14, was about to enter the “OUT” door inside the dining hall witnesses saw Aaron sprinting at the door tearing off his shirt to reveal a stylized “I” logo and yelling about having to find a phonebooth. Moments later a daring young hero came in through the window to explain dining room etiquette to the young camper, causing a sizeable portion of property damage. Aaron himself has refused to comment about the theory of his supposed alter-ego “The work that Incinmaster does is important, he saves everyone the misfortune of chadar ochel mis-adventures and it seems like only a really cool, awesome smart guy could be the Incinmaster” Our sources show that Aaron spends most of his time in front of his computer googling “cool theme tunes” “catchphrases to say when saving the world” and “where to find a sidekick”. We here at the Sci-Tech Times would like to give the Incinmaster, who ever he is, our appreciation!
