Today's Story

Discovering Sci-Tech South A Satire News Story By Harry

In a surprising turn of events, 6 Points Sci-Tech South has been rediscovered in Antarctica, after being lost over 40 years ago. A freak accident engulfed the entire building in liquid nitrogen, keeping all inhabitants engulfed in their original positions to this day. The accident was caused by an earlier version of the cyborg Devon-X, formally known as: Devon Barker. This early version of the cyborg stubbed his big toe on a water bottle and knocked over a butane fire during a Boker Big Bang. These events might have been what caused the current version of Devon-X to have a fire compressor to keep camp from burning down as well as an operating system that will not work if everyone in the room is not wearing closed toed shoes. The earlier Devon-X's only choice was to call a lockdown and engulf the entire building in liquid nitrogen to preserve the occupants for a later time. Only he could stop 6 Points Sci-Tech South from burning down. This earlier version of Devon-X was the only escapee of the incident and thankfully we have his memory card which recorded the whole incident, so we know exactly what happened. The frozen inhabitants have been moved to the nearest hospital and are currently defrosting. In other news Jaynor the Conqueror has invited Sci-Tech South to join forces to conquer all 6-Points Academies
