PETA unleashes havoc on scientists everywhere

A Satire News Article By Olivia Merrill (10th Grade)

PETA has been freeing opossums from science labs everywhere. After hacking into the security systems of science labs across the country, the controversial animal rights group has been sneaking into these labs in the middle of the night and freeing the opossums commonly used in various science experiments. After being released, the opossums have been demonstrating the ability to grow to massive sizes. Some opossums have even gone as far as destroying everything in their paths. Dr. John McScienston of The Science Institution of America warns Americans that these opossums are radioactive. Dr. McScienston also warns that the radioactive opossums grow aggressive at the mention of science, leaving no science institution safe as is. The only way to safely continue in the pursuit of science is to replace the word “science” with the word phrase “flying spaghetti monster.” Due to the development of these recent events, the name of this camp might change.
